THE LONE NEGATIVE...

The only negative I know is: I never give up.

NOW-NOW-NOW

KING KONG WARNING...

Sealed on the outside of a letter recently sent to The Cameron Herald, this note:

"If you throw this in your wastebasket unopened, a capsule of water inside will break, spilling onto a dehydrated gorilla. He will then jump out and hug you to death."

NOW-NOW-NOW

GROW OR CHANGE

I was asked about this sentence in 117's piece about "How the West was Won" in The Herald of March 3.

"The West was Won" by a marvelous people who didn't care "how" it was to be done, but that it was to be done.

Opportunity was what built the West and Texas and anything for that matter. Within the moral structure of the societies from which pioneers come, those pioneers "do what has to be done" in face of new environment, new challenges, new circumstances, sometime beyond, but not necessarily without regard to past values.

Overriding values of honesty, courage, and performance build new societies, later allowing time for structuring and intellectualizing a stabilizing order in civilization.

Even among the most civilized, sometimes the values of continuity are left behind to establish new boundaries for those values which deserve continuity.

It is in this context that Western man has continued to migrate wherever his strengths-over-weaknesses prevail, allowing time for the renewal of his strengths and purging out or strengthening of his frailties.

The longer he stays in one place, the more difficult it is to sustain his strength, diminished by imitation among numbers. He first builds, then he goes to the province of the mind. And finally he feels compulsion to move on, testing what he believes to be his best against the new environment, perhaps so foreign he fails or reverts to earlier devices to prevail.

Western man is aware of a universality, at his best, which is perhaps the force which compels him from known to unknown, from comfort to danger, from weakness to strength.

He of the American West, of the Western World or of a shrunken globe, knows that if things fail to improve, to grow, then things or his environment must change.

Milam-Areans Youth Mourns For Friend

BELTON

Kenneth Williams of Belton was pretty grim-faced when he said, "I'm just fattening up my best friend for the kill. I'll be very sad when he's gone, but what can you do with a 1260-pound steer but butcher him?" So the grand champion winner of the 1977 Bell County Junior Fair and Livestock Show said about his prize animal, Red Devil. Red Devil sold last Saturday at the auction after the show for $4,410.

Volunteer Fireman Burned

ROSEBUD

A fire of undetermined origin destroyed a farm house near Rosebud late last Friday afternoon and Rosebud volunteer firemen Tommy Lane received serious burns. Layne was standing near a kerosene barrel when it exploded like a rocket, sending flames in a fireball. Layne was in the fireball's path. Layne received second and third degree burns on his arms and legs, with his hands most seriously injured.

HUD Approves CDA Grant

ROCKDALE

HUD has approved the city of Rockdale's request for a $250,000 Community Development Agency grant, it was announced last week. The funds are to be used in two predominantly minority-inhabited sections of the city: southeast Rockdale and a smaller section in the northeast part of town. The largest part of the money will be used for paving streets, drainage, and installing sewer and water lines.

Unique Sunday Observed

SOMERVILLE

A Somerville church observed "No Excuse Sunday," with a cot at the door for those who like to sleep on Sunday morning and pots and pans at the door for women who feel they must cook. The list of excuses had a remedy example for all of them. The pastor said other churches of all religions have enjoyed the success of just such a Sunday.

Mailbox Trip Fatal

GEORGETOWN

An 11-year-old girl died Tuesday after she was struck by an auto while trying to cross busy SH 29 about five miles west of Georgetown. The girl had just collected the family's mail from the family's roadside mailbox and was returning home across the highway when the collision occurred. No charges were filed against the driver.

Rural Crime Increasing

GATESVILLE

Supporting his contention that rural crime is skyrocketing in Coryell County, Sheriff Winfred Cummings released a report showing that 81 burglaries and thefts have occurred over a seven-month span, with the loss suffered by the victims of these crimes totaling $83,694. "Our office is open 24 hours a day but there's no way we've been able to keep up with the increase in offenses," he said.

Wilkerson Dies; Was Author Of Old-Time Stories

An old Cameron Herald writer who was able to evoke pictures of Cameron in its early days died Thursday in Houston. Jessie Wilkerson, 81, also recalled his days as a "printer's devil" and delivery boy for the Herald in the stories he wrote.

Wilkerson was born Sept. 22, 1895 in Cameron, the son of Leroy Wilkerson and Dorcas Jane Ruby. He lived in Cameron until he was about 16, then moved to Temple. He was a veteran of World War I and had lived in Houston for the past 42 years. He was a retired employee of Texaco.

Wilkerson wrote numerous stories and articles which appeared in The Herald over the years, and was the author of two books which recalled his boyhood in Cameron, "Comrades of the Canyons" and "Come Home, Bill Bailey."

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sallie E. Wilkerson of Houston; one son, Dale Wilkerson of Houston; a daughter, Marilyn Ross of Houston; and seven grandchildren.

Homestead Exemption

Rep. Dan Kubiak reminds older homeowners in his district that they must file a city tax exemption form by April 30 in order to receive the $3,000 city tax exemption.

The form must be filed each year in order to receive the homestead exemption.

School Plan Shown

Cameron has basically fulfilled its commitments within the guidelines established for the 1975-76 Accreditation Pilot Project, according to a letter from the accreditation division of Texas Education Agency to Cameron School Supt. Buddy Dulin.

Director H. E. Phillips acknowledged receipt of the school district's summary of procedures, needs assessment, long-range plan, along with school board approval.

He added that an annual review should be made locally of the district's progress in carrying out its adopted plan.

Milam Road Projects Approved In Austin

Milam County highways will benefit from work approved by the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission as a part of the 1977 Highway Safety and Betterment and Farm to Market Road Improvement Program according to Supervising Resident Engineer Delton Kittrell.

Kittrell said that improvements will be made on the two major highways in Milam County, US 77 and US 190, north and northwest of Cameron. Sections of US 77 between Cameron and Falls County will receive level up to provide a better ride and improve skid factors during wet weather driving. Similar work will be done on US 190 between Buckholts and the Bell County line. This work is estimated to cost $345,400.

District Engineer Joe G. Hanover advised that statewide, the 1977 program provides for the improvement of some 4,665 miles of highways at an estimated construction cost of slightly more than $40 million, with an additional $7,700 earmarked for right-of-way acquisition and relocation assistance. Another $959,000 has been set aside for later assignment.

Similar programs were deferred for about a year in 1975 and 1976 as a result of the financial crisis of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

However, since such programs included rehabilitation of old and obsolete highways, safety measures, and provisions for increased traffic capacity, they could not be long deferred.

Approximately 61 percent of the program funds will be devoted to State and US Highways, 37 percent to Farm to Market Roads, and 2 percent held in reserve.

In all, the program includes 694 projects in 212 counties of the state.

Programs such as this are necessary to prevent deterioration of the highway system and a resulting decline in mobility, Hanover said.

Civilized Frame Of Reference....

How Things Change!

During the Boer War in South Africa at the turn of the 20th century, a young English correspondent was captured by the Dutch, only to escape.

His escapades and "daring-do" became overnight sensations in the London press; he later came to this country to lecture on the same circuit with Mark Twain. His mother was American and his father was English nobility.

This man's widow at 91 is selling off paintings he willed to her, among other valuables to maintain a modest decorum, beyond a $26 weekly pension. She rejects an oversight Parliament has offered to correct, lack of qualification for widows of former Prime Ministers.

She would "greatly deplore" special consideration.

HTC-HTC-HTC

The President (and self-proclaimed field marshal) says he is going to invade southern Africa, including Rhodesia.

A former Ugandan official, among a quarter million who have fled, tells this:

The President divorced three wives, four allowable according to Muslim tradition, but later learned that one wife, a Christian had an abortion rather than have a baby out of wedlock.

The President had killed his former wife's doctor, the doctor's wife and two children, the former wife, whose limbs were severed and sewn back on the opposite side, a grotesqueness he showed his two surviving children by the former wife.

HTC-HTC-HTC

The President of the United States has recently compelled this Ugandan President, Idi Amin, not to tamper with the welfare of several hundred Americans still in Uganda, these mostly missionaries. Amin in his way condescended.

Widow of the young Englishman who later became British Wartime Prime Minister Winston Churchill is Lady Spencer-Churchill. She is at least alive.

The bestiality of the Amin Regime is documented by hundreds of stories, an emerging nation of 12 million shadowing the ambitions of dozens of other nationalistic hopes.

The irony is inescapable.

Churchill was hailed in the West as the greatest man of the first half of the 20th century, not because of noble birth or inheritance, but because he was noble and capable of leading the Western World into victorious collision with the bestiality of the Hitler Regime.

This victory brought world leadership to the U. S., survival to Britain, and the end to colonialism.

What kind of debt is owed to the Churchills of this world? And is this factionalized Amin succession any different from the transient madness of a Hitler or Stalin?

Will the outrage of dominant numbers learn the inherent weakness of their strength--numbers?

When a brute leads brute mob strength, the result is anarchy called nationalism. A nation is mindless with leadership like Amin. A nation is empty without leadership, not just in wartime with Churchill, but anytime without a civilized frame of reference.

CAN WE LEGISLATE MORALITY? A SPEAKEASY, 1920s. Widespread violation of the Volstead Act, providing enforcement for the prohibition amendment, convinced many observers that moral problems cannot be solved through the law.

Law And Morality

By Lon L. Fuller

Editor's Note: This is the eighth of 16 articles in the series, "Moral Choices in Contemporary Society." In this article, Lon L. Fuller, professor emeritus at Harvard Law School, discusses the relationship between law and morality in regulating the conduct of society. These articles, which explore the controversial moral dilemmas that perplex Americans today, were written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Copyright 1977 by the Regents of the University of California.

Law and morality, to varying degrees, regulate human interaction in society, sometimes reinforcing one another, at other times imposing contradictory obligations.

But there are also many laws that have little to do with the larger issues of moral conduct--with securing justice, equality, or such other forms of "good" as may be deemed desirable. These laws are, rather, pragmatic regulations for facilitating or making possible orderly relations between people.

Still other decisions affecting the conduct of society are not guided even by these pragmatic regulations. Such decisions cannot be reached through the application of impersonal, objective rules; indeed, the basis for them cannot be found in either law or morality, and yet they are binding on the individuals concerned.

To understand these issues, I suggest we examine some of the actual operations of a legal order and the ways in which legal rules and processes are employed to shape and control human behavior.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD

I should like to begin with the body of law regulating vehicular traffic and known as "the rule of the road." Over most of the world the rule is that you pass the oncoming vehicle on the right and overtake on the left the vehicle moving ahead of you. A minority of countries, including Great Britain, have an opposite rule--you pass on the left and overtake on the right. Though the rule is now practically everywhere embodied in written statutes, it took its origin in unwritten customary practice, which helps to explain how there came to be two rules, each serving the same function within its own territory.

"The rule of the road" would seem to present little in the way of tensions between law and morality. The man with consideration for others and an ardent desire not to do harm to them will as a driver follow the rule of the road. If he is morally indifferent to the fate of others, he will nevertheless be likely to observe the rule of the road, not only to avoid being brought into court, but to save his own skin.

There are problems however. Even in ordinary traffic, rules of the road depend upon a sense of responsibility toward the other fellow and some perception of the problems he faces.

The law of traffic is thus not merely punitive; it is essentially facilitative. It lets the driver know, with some assurance, what he can expect, not only from the traffic officer, but from other drivers as well.

This is matter of knowing what to expect is basic in any functioning legal order. In his book, "The Law of Primitive Man," Adamson Hoeber writes that a visitor to the Musk Ox Eskimos in Canada learned that all 15 adult males in the community in the early 1920s had been either a principal or an accessory in a murder. Hoeber reports:

For each of them "the motive was invariably some quarrel about a woman."

In part, the Eskimo difficulties are enhanced by the lack of marriage and divorce rituals which might demarcate the beginning and the end of a marital relationship. Marriage is entered into merely by bedding down with the intention of living together; divorce is effected simply by not living together any more.

There may be a certain irony in comparing a marriage ceremony with a highway stop sign, but the analogy is not lacking in a certain validity.

THE LAW OF DIVORCE

Let us consider briefly the law of divorce. In former times that law was to a large extent "objective" and "impersonal." To obtain a divorce a party to the marriage had to prove some specific act or omission on the part of his or her partner. Among the acts that would justify the granting of a divorce were adultery, desertion, habitual drunkenness, and other similar forms of misbehavior. This meant that the law of divorce was, like the rule of the road, impersonal and "act-oriented."

Recently there has been a development in many jurisdictions that is called "the theory of the breakdown-of-the-marriage." Instead of having to prove some specifically defined misconduct by the party against whom the divorce suit is brought, what has to be established is that the parties have lost the capacity for a functioning marital relationship.

Perhaps the best test of a loss of this capacity is to have a skilled mediator attempt a reconciliation of the parties. But the judge who has the ultimate power to decide the case may or may not have any special aptitude for guiding a mediative procedure toward an ultimate reconciliation.

If, after discussing with the husband and wife their conceptions of the problems that have caused their marriage to fail, the judge grants a divorce, this does not mean that the standards that have guided him to that conclusion can properly be categorized as either "moral" or "legal." Neither party may have acted immorally or illegally, but their divergent dispositions may have made a successful marriage impossible.

RELAXING THE RULES

In our complex and densely populated societies there are many decisions that cut deeply into men's lives, but that cannot be shaped or justified by standards derived directly from morality or law. An example would be zoning regulations. These regulations may limit the size of a house, determine how closely the house can be located to the street it faces, stipulate how high a radio antenna on the roof can be, etc.

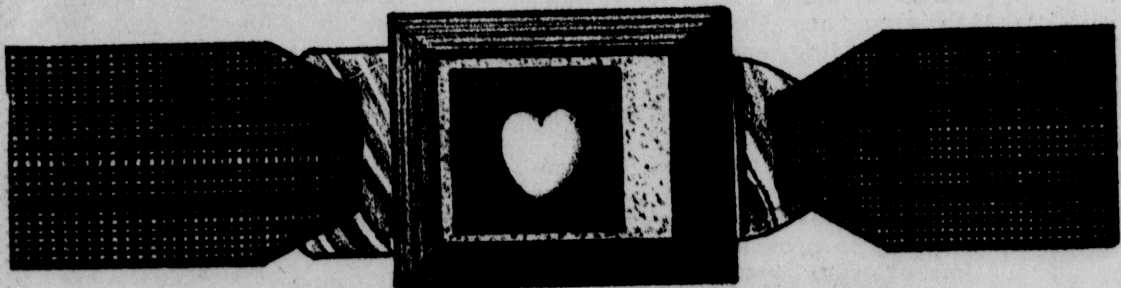

Regulations of this sort can often be relaxed on a showing of a special need to make an exception in the case at hand. The request for a relaxation of a particular restriction will be brought before an administrative agency, which in deciding whether to grant the relaxation will proceed in a manner much like that of a court of law.

But what may be lacking is the guidance of formal rules stating with some precision under what conditions the normal restraints may be lifted. On what basis, then, is an exception to the regulatory law to be granted? The household may have an expensive radio and may ask to be given the privilege of extending his antenna to a height above that normally allowed. He may rest his request on any number of claims tending to establish that his situation is a special one: he is working on an invention affecting radio transmission that requires a higher antenna; he is a physician who wants to give advice to patients who have radio sets, but no telephones, since they live in a somewhat distant mountain range.

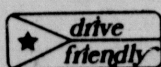

The views expressed in Courses by Newspaper are those of the authors only and do not necessarily reflect those of the University of California, the National Endowment for the Humanities, or of the participating newspapers and colleges.

NEXT WEEK: Ernest van den Haag, New York psychiatrist and a member of the faculty of New York University and the New School for Social Research, discusses "The Effectiveness of Punishment" as a deterrent to crime.

Diocese will celebrate the mass. A reception will follow in the parish hall.

Sister Pauline, Administrator of St. Edward Hospital, was the guest speaker. She spoke on medical and moral rights of a patient. She told of the complications of modern technology and places on the medical staff.

Sister Pauline also spoke about dying with dignity, the rights of a patient, etc.

Think Thin

If you are thinking thin and trying to trim inches, take the agony out of dieting.

Standing by to give a healthy assist in lowering calorie intake but still providing great taste is the freshest fruit around--grapefruit.

It's in its prime now, says Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

40% Of Marriages End In Divorce

Forty percent of new marriages will end in divorce, if current trends continue, Debby Johnson, a family life education specialist, reports.

"Divorce, in most cases, is the result of an unpleasant commitment to a loved one--which taxes both financial and emotional resource. Divorce is never pleasant, and even the most amicable divorce is traumatic for one or both partners," the specialist explained.

Miss Johnson is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

"Women initiate the divorce action in 68 percent of the suits, and over half these women are 28 years old or under."

"Although the proportion of children living with fathers is increasing, only 8.4 percent of the children with divorced parents reside with their fathers," she noted.

To keep trauma due to settlement complications to a minimum, the specialist recommended that couples who foresee long, drawn-out negotiations--over money, children of property--seek lawyers who specialize in family law or at least handle a fair volume of divorce cases.

"They usually charge about the same fee and have had more experience in handling problematic situations."

"The lawyer each individual chooses must be good at dealing with the other side on his client's behalf. Negotiations center around a document called a 'settlement agreement' or a 'separation agreement,' which spells out the details of child custody and visitation, alimony and support payments, and division of property," she added.

For the names of family-law specialists, couples can contact friends who are recently divorced, other lawyers, and the referral service of the local or state Bar Association.

Other sources include the Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory in the public library. In this volume, lawyers can pay to list the specialties in which they are interested.

Fashion

According to a recent survey, the average American woman owns seven pairs of slacks with two-thirds of the women planning to buy more slacks during 1977, reports Mrs. Becky Culp, a clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

Yoemen Take Tourney Opener

The Cameron Yoemen baseballers dropped their season opener to A&M Consolidated, but accepting the defeat, the Yoemen have begun action in the Rockdale Tournament defeating the Lockhart Lions in the first round of action, 5-0.

The Yoemen wasted no time getting on the scoreboard in the first inning as Joe Reyes crossed the plate for the Yoemen. Reyes led off the batting order with a double then managed to score on an error by the Lions center fielder.

Innings two and three went fast as neither team managed to dent the scoreboard, and it was not until the fourth inning that the Yoemen rallied with two runs.

Donald Komar reached base, drawing a walk. Sydney Youngblood then drew a walk to put a Yoeman at first and second, and James Thompson was walked, loading the bases for the Yoemen.

With a man at every corner, Ronnie Orsag singled in Komar for the Yoemen's second score of the day, and Joe Reyes brought in the third, tapping a base hit to bring Sydney Youngblood home. The Yoemen then led the ball game 3-0.

From the fourth inning on it seemed to be Yoemen all the way as they scored a single run in the fifth and one more for good measure in the seventh to win the game 5-0.

Yoeman David Rinn singled in the fifth then scored on a third baseman error to give the Yoemen their fourth run of the game to boost the Yoemen out in front of the Lions 4-0.

The Yoemen closed the day, scoring in the seventh inning. Sydney Youngblood drove in the Yoemen's final run as the result of a third baseman error and the Yoemen took the bout 5-0.

Gerry Heitman went the distance for the Yoemen, pitching a three hitter, with three strikeouts while the team as a whole had only two errors for the day.

Coach Roy Knight said, "We looked good, fielded well, and hit the ball. We couldn't ask for more. In our season opener we just got off on the wrong foot but I feel like we have settled down and are ready to play ball. We had entirely too many errors against A&M. No one wins ball games with nine errors."

At presstime the Yoemen were in their second bout in the tourney, battling the Smithville Tigers. The Yoemen were trailing at the bottom of the fourth.

AF Changes Enlistment Program

The Air Force has instituted major changes in its Prior Service Enlistment Program, according to Air Force Recruiting Detachment 404, headquartered in Arlington.

Provided they are otherwise qualified, former enlistees may now be out of the service up to five years and qualify to enlist in the Air Force. Previously, applicants were disqualified if they had been out of the military services more than three years.

Also, eligibles who previously served in a military branch other than the Air Force in the E-6 or higher pay grade may now reenter in pay grade E-6 (technical sergeant). Before the change, E-3 (airman first class) was the highest grade offered ex-Army, Navy, or Marine Corps enlistees.

Plan Offered For Firemen

AUSTIN — State senators Don Adams of Jasper and John Traeger of Seguin today sponsored Texas' first complete and actuarially sound pension plan for volunteer fire fighters.

"We feel it's high time the State acted on behalf of volunteer fire fighters for their years of unselfish service to its rural communities," said Sen. Adams.

"This is the most far-reaching pension plan in existence," noted Sen. Traeger. "It will be a model for others in the future because it combines centralized collection with local controls."

The plan increases benefits, reduces the level of member contributions, and meets all requirements of the Employee Retirement Security Act of 1974 (the new Federal Pension Reform Act).

"It represents the best concepts in money management, combined with actuarially sound planning," said Sen. Adams. "We save money by using statewide services for collections, but the disbursement and implementation of the pension fund are in the hands of the local organizations."

"Our pension plan is sound now. It has been taken apart by actuaries. It will be sound in the future," said Sen. Traeger.

"It will not face the problems of pension plans like those in the City of New York because it is now a giveaway," said Sen. Adams.

Features of the Adams-Traeger bill include:

"The plan is optional. If a unit elects to join the system, its employer (governmental unit under whose jurisdiction the unit falls) makes a monthly contribution of at least $12 per fire fighter. "The fire fighter makes no monetary contribution," said Sen. Adams. "The State contributes an amount necessary to keep the system actuarially sound up to 1/3-the employer contributions that year. (The Legislative Budget Board estimates this cost to be $220,902 each year for the next five years.)"

New Rule Told For GI Benefit

Veterans going to school under the GI Bill could wind up in debt to the federal government if they drop courses or receive non-punitive grades under certain circumstances, Jack Coker, VA regional office director, said today.

Coker explained that a recent Congressional amendment to the GI Bill requires the agency to retroactively cancel assistance payments for a course dropped without a grade. This applies also in cases when a course is completed but the grade assigned is, in effect, ignored by the school for graduation purposes.

The new regulations do not apply when the situation was caused by circumstances beyond the student's control, Coker said.

He described the new regulation as a major change in GI Bill benefit payments policy.

Engineers Honor Two Researchers

Two Texas A&M University researchers were named "Engineer of the Year" and "Young Engineer of the Year" by members of the Brazos Valley Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers Friday night.

Dr. Jim Smathers, co-director of the Rehabilitation Engineering Center and division head of the Bioengineering Program, and Dr. John M. Sweeten of the Agricultural Engineering Department were honored with the respective titles in an awards banquet at Briarcrest Country Club which climaxed "Engineers Week" activities.

According to experts, a ruby-throated hummingbird has 940 feathers.

Fad Helped Goat Industry

The Teddy Bear's popularity gave the Texas goat industry its first major boost, according to book published this week. June R. Welch, in Going Great in the Lone Star State, says growth resulting from the Teddy Bear fad enabled in the industry to supply the volume of mohair which automobile seats would require a few years later.

The Teddy Bear was suggested by a Mississippi trip made by Theodor Roosevelt. After the president helped settle a boundary dispute he was taken on a bear hunt. When no game was found the sponsors hauled in a bear cub, which Roosevelt then refused to shoot.

Washington Post cartoonist Clifford Berryman's drawing of the incident gained wide popularity and inspired a Brooklyn candy store owner to make and sell a cloth toy which he called "Teddy's Bear."

The millions of Teddy Bears sold in the next few months required great quantities of mohair, for their plush coverings were made of mohair. Texas had--and has--most of the nation's mohair--yielding Angora goats. Going Great in the Lone Star State, the fourth volume in the Vignettes of Texas series, covers Texas subjects as diverse as Jimmy Doolittle's flight under the Pecos River High Bridge, the rowdy days of Fort Griffin, the founding of the Carnegie libraries, and Charles Lindbergh's crash into the hardware store at Camp Wood, Texas.

Preschool Traffic Safety Booklets Now Available

A new program is being offered to individuals and groups interested in the traffic safety of preschool children. These youngsters - under the age of six - are pedestrian accident victims more often than any other segment of the population, according to the American Automobile Association.

"Each year, nationwide, there are about 130,000 pedestrian deaths and injuries," says William M. Coffey, general manager of AAA, Texas Division, "and preschool children are killed or hurt in numbers far out of proportion to their share of total population."

Although their exposure to traffic is lower than for other age groups, Coffey says, their ability to perceive the dangers and act accordingly is not fully developed. Consequently, every traffic encounter for a child under age six carries a higher risk than it does for older people.

Coffey notes that preschoolers represent only about 9 percent of the population, yet account for 23 percent - about 30,000 - of the pedestrian deaths and injuries each year.

In an attempt to reduce the number of these tragedies, AAA has developed a teaching program called Preschool Children In Traffic. Although the unique program can be used in nursery schools, kindergartens, and child care centers, it is aimed primarily at parents. It provides parent with a series of five booklets for helping children develop safer pedestrian habits.

The booklets are available as a set from AAA. The first booklet is a "Parents' Guide for Action," which explains the entire teaching effort. The other four booklets are designed for use with children and include simple language, large printing and drawings to illustrate the characteristics and hazards of streets and traffic.

The children's booklets are to be used progressively. As a child learns the lessons of one, he can move on to the next. The approach is positive. The booklets can help children learn what actions to take and the reasons for such actions.

"We feel that this AAA safety program is filling a vacuum that desperately needs to be filled," said Coffey. "Most of our society's safety education, naturally enough, is aimed at the people easiest to reach

--those enrolled in school. There is very little for the preschool youngster, but we know from the data that the danger to preschool children exists. We also know that crucial safety habits are formed in children in this age group."

The booklets are available at most AAA offices, including all ten in the Texas Division, at a cost of 50 cents per set. Mail orders are one dollar. Additional information on the program is available by contacting: Preschool Children In Traffic, American Automobile Association, P.O. Box 1986, Houston, TX 770011

Patman Urges Defeat Of Loan Interest Bill

"Passage of Senate Bill 615 will be a permanent disaster for the people of Texas," Sen. Bill Patman of Ganado said. "The enormity of the problem created by the bill is clearly illustrated by a comparison of current rates to rates which would now be in effect if the bill had been approved in 1967."

"For example, a $1,200 loan, the amount of money most frequently borrowed by Texans, now carries a finance charge of $378 for three years. If the rates and maturator proposed by Sen. Adams had been adopted 10 years ago, using 1967 as a base period, that same loan would carry a finance charge of $662.19 - an increase of $284.19."

"In other words, if the new rates had been approved in 1967, Texas families would now be paying 75 percent more for borrowing $1,200 than they now pay."

"Is it any wonder that Sen. Adams can boast that the loan companies will not have to come back to the Legislature for future rate increases? They won't need to come back if SB 615 is approved, because Adams will have assured them everything they have asked for - indefinitely into the future."

"In the meantime, the people of Texas have been suffering greatly under charges currently authorized, as shown by the high rate of defaults on installment loans."

"One out of every six installment payments collected by loan companies in 1975 carried a default charge, according to an analysis of records at the Consumer Credit Commission. Those charges are added to every loan payment which is late or just partly paid on time."

"This has meant an extra five percent burden to the borrower on every late payment - and additional income for the loan company."

"In 1974, times were so tough that one in five monthly installment payments carried the punishment of a default charge."

"And that's not all. Hundreds of thousands of other payments to loan companies by Texas borrowers in 1974 and 1975 carried 'deferment charges.' These are charges collected for postponing an installment payment for one month or longer."

Farm Show Set At Fort Worth

Over 75,000 farmers and ranchers are expected to push through the gates of the 1977 Southwest Farm Show and Championship Tractor Pull which opens for three days, March 11-13, in Fort Worth's Tarrant County Convention Center.

With more than $6 million worth of the latest in farm and ranch equipment on display, the show doors will open each day at 10:30 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m., according to Harry Bryant, Farm Show manager.

Bryant emphasized that this year's show was by far the largest ever to be held with over 110 individual exhibits. Several of the larger exhibits will cover more than 4,000 sq. ft.

Bentsen Asks Probe Of Natural Gas Withholding

Washington, D.C. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Tuesday called for an Interior Department investigation to determine to what extent the withholding of natural gas from production in the East and Midwest contributed to the natural gas shortage this winter.

"We know of at least three areas in the East and Midwest where there is natural gas in the ground that was not being produced and supplied to the American people during this coldest winter in the history of our Republic. I want to know how many other cases there are," Bentsen said in a Senate speech.

The Senator said he has sent a telegram to Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus seeking the probe.

"Until the crisis this year the State of Pennsylvania had blocked efforts to drill for gas on the U. S. side of Lake Erie even though Canada had been drilling on her side for years," Sen. Bentsen said.

"There is an estimated 600 billion cubic feet of natural gas under Lake Erie but until the shortages this year the Governor of Pennsylvania refused to allow drilling in the lake."

Bentsen also pointed out that politicians and other East Coast residents went to court in a successful effort to prevent development of an estimated 1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 1.4 billion barrels of oil in the Atlantic Ocean's Baltimore Canyon.

"It is neither fair nor rational for them to come in and drill off the Texas coast and the Louisiana coast and then block efforts to drill off their coast," the Senator said.

"It is neither fair nor rational for them to get their gas at a low, subsidized price while the people of Texas and other producing states pay for virtually all of the natural gas exploration that's being done in this country," he said.

Staying lean

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Women who wish to lose weight should increase their physical activity rather than relying solely on reducing their calorie intake, a University of Texas nutrition specialist suggests.

Dr. RoseAnn Shorey says one of the problems of extreme diets is that fewer calories are not sufficient for proper nourishment "because so many of the trace minerals and vitamins occur at small amounts in a wide variety of foods."

She points out "exercise can allow us to eat more and stay lean," but notes that the success of a weight-loss plan depends on "day-in and day-out discipline." She adds: "There's no easy way."
